THE Michigan State superintendent of insurance in his forthcoming report, says the insurance companies have paid out for fire losses in that State nearly $10, 000,000 during the past eight years. With other students of fire and insurance stattes he thinks the destruction of proportion of proportions. The meeting was of little importance, its sole object being the fixing istice he thinks the destruction of property by fire is due to over-insurance. He upon a plan for a county organisation and the appointing of delegates to the Michigan the issuing of policies to indeminify for more than three fourths of the ascertained loss. The annual net loss of Michigan from fires he estimates at the Michigan fires he estimates at the of Michigan from fires he estimates at some of our Irish families; you could swarcely imagine how they manage to exist. And yet, sir, they are very proud. The Catholic priest has opened a free school for his people, and do you know they are too proud to send their children to it, but prefer sending them to the "Academy." At Grafton you can hear the same cry, but in comparison with Clarksburg and Parkersbug, times must be considered flush here.

"In regard to Grant? Well, I do not exactly know, but it looks very much to me as though he was the coming man. When two political parties begin equabling, as at present, a third party is almost always called in, and it looks to me just now as if the Republicans may become so desperate as to send for him to come back. If he should ever become President again, I have no doubt that he will assume or be invested with a military dictatorship, and then good bye to all our Republican institutions. I hope for better things, but then in this unsettled state of affairs there is no knowing what may happen."

The State of things at Clarksburg and Parkersburg.

Letter is the Clarksburg News.

Our farmers are in very truth the only prosperous people in the State. All along the line of the North Western road the cry of hard times is heard. At Clarksburg business is dead. * At Parkersburg's best citizens, "I am surprised to see how some of our people manage to get along. His first use of his position is to offer to extinguish the 1,000 Republican majority if the Democrats will pay him well enough.

After he has concluded this negotiation, but before he receives his pay, the vote of his parish becomes of National importance, and he thinks he can make a better thing by "going back" on his Democratio purchasers, and selling out to the Republicans.

The latter meets his direct advances for a bargain with assurances that if he will do his duty, according to the law and the facts of the care, they will "see that he is taken care of."

He construes this to mean that he will be paid better by the Republicans for doing right than by the Democrats for doing wrong, and being a man of virtuous ancilinations—when virtue is most profitable—he concludes to do right.

His reward is not in proportion to the estimate he places on his services, and after various attempts to blackmail prominent Republicans into doing something more for him, he resolves to sell out again to the Democrate.
